

On 3.- 4. DETSEMBER 2020

Online and at the Conference Centre of the Estonian Academy of Security Sciences at 61 Kase Street

The international hybrid conference by the Estonian Academy of Security Sciences:

SAFELY IN A CRISIS

How safe do we feel in the global crisis today?

The leading experts from Estonia and its neighbouring countries share the best lessons and practices gathered in the fields of internal security, healthcare and education in the changed conditions. We will discuss the potential hazards of the global crisis on the internal security of individual states and the possible ways forward. We will talk about the crisis and security – clearly, based on facts and without emotions.

Registration on the website of the Estonian Academy of Security Sciences. Due to the global pandemic situation, we recommend to participate via web conference.

Topics:

- How did the crisis affect the general vision of security? What should we be prepared for in the future?
- How did we manage to maintain the state's internal security during the crisis?
- How should we continue and what should be developed further?
- Does Estonia need a separate institution for crisis management?
- The experience gained and solutions found by the neighbouring countries during the crisis
- Remote learning – what can and cannot be taught remotely to ensure security?
- What are the conditions for ensuring good remote learning in the field of internal security?
- Are we ready for another crisis?

The first day 3 December will include presentations and panel discussions while on 4 December there will be workshops. The conference will be broadcast online with simultaneous interpretation into Estonian and English. Conference attendance is free of charge. A more detailed programme with information on presenters and registration will be updated: www.sisekaitse.ee/en/conference2020
